

Why the Single Tax Was Opposed in California

(Continued from page 181)

on a large scale seek to repossess the titles it has sold for a trifle compared with after-created worth?

I have referred to a few of the struggles we may make for reestablishment of the communal rights. There yet remains an enormous field of thought we have scarcely commenced to explore. Our horizon has to be infinitely widened.

Our idea of education needs to be very much developed. The whole social field is related to our central idea and we cannot understand for what we are fighting unless we understand better all the relations of society. And, as I have indicated, in our explorations we have yet much to do. We have given little study to method of making our ideas effective. We have been theoreticians. The world of study relating to practice is yet before us.
